I do not believe that the current Technician class license exam is overly complicated. I believe that 5 wpm morse code is still desireable and beneficial for Extra Class licensees but is not required for lower licenses. I believe that the entry level license examination should be focused on regulations and operating skills that the new licensee will need to understand prior to getting on the air.
Eliminating Morse Code from all licenses will virtually wipe out that mode because no one will be required to learn it.
The Communicator label for the entry level license seems acceptable. I agree that the Technician classes could disappear and be merged with General class. I agree with the frequency and power configurations.
